Dr Edgar Mitchell, former US astronaut and the sixth man to walk on the moon, has claimed that aliens do exist and that planet Earth is being visited by extra-terrestrial beings. He made the comments during an interview for Kerrang radio in the United Kingdom. Mitchell said that the Roswell incident , in which alien life forms were supposed to have been recovered from a downed spacecraft, was a real event, and was being covered up by the US government. He also claimed that the actual physiological appearance of these aliens are similar to those of the classic "little green men" usually portrayed in the films. He said that the aliens had technology that was much more advanced than our own, and that if the aliens had been hostile, the human race would have been gone long ago. His claims follow an increasing public awareness of the UFO phenomenon following the recent disclosure of information held by the British government. NASA released an official statement saying that the organization does not track UFOs and that there is no conspiracy to withhold such information from the public.

Quote: "Dr Mitchell said his position as an astronaut meant many high ranking intelligence and military personal had felt comfortable telling him their stories and "getting it off their chests" before they died. "(They) selected me and said, independently – this wasn't a group effort – independently that maybe I might be a safe person to tell their story to," he said. "And all of them confirmed, and what I'm saying is they confirmed the Roswell incident was a real incident and they in some way had some part in it that they wanted to talk about. "The crash of an alien spacecraft in the Roswell area was a real event and much of the lore, I can't say all of the lore, but much of the fact that dead bodies were recovered and live ones were recovered, that they were not of this world, was the story."

Mitchell's background of having been involved in the US space programme would, on the surface, appear to add some weight to his beliefs. But it's Mitchell's involvement in the paranormal and the occult which seem to lie at the heart of this latest development. In his book, entitled, The Way of the Explorer, Mitchell recounts how he was involved in a private extra-sensory perception (telepathy) experiment during his return flight to earth from the moon.

Quote: "Mitchell tells how, while returning to earth, he carried out a private ESP experiment that seemed to yield positive results. Subsequently, he founded the Institute of Noetic Sciences, in order to test paranormal phenomena scientifically. We hear of Uri Geller's ability to bend spoons at a distance and of how Mitchell's own mother had her eyesight restored by American psychic Norbu Chen--until she realized that Chen was not a Christian and her near-blindness returned.
